PREPARING FOR GROWTH, DATAOPTEK CEO INSTALLS NEW BOARD

(Los Angeles, CA) September 30, 2008—DataOptek CEO Roderick J. Byrd announced a major restructuring of the Los Angeles based telecommunications network installation company today. According to Byrd, customer demand for broadband access, new and upgraded data and voice services, and network-enabled security systems create tremendous growth potential for companies such as DataOptek. “The company’s reorganization positions us to benefit from the increasing business opportunities coming our way as the demands on our country’s communications infrastructure grow,” Byrd said.

The first major component of Byrd’s plan is the creation of the company’s first Board of Directors. The new Board comprises a team of accomplished and award-winning individuals. Each brings talent and experience to the company that complement Byrd’s industry expertise and established reputation. “All of the board members bring a proven track record of excellence in their respective specialties,” Byrd said. “Our shared vision is to work together to rapidly grow the company to become a leader in the network systems installation industry.”

The members of the new board are:

Since then, the company’s client list has grown to include scores of public and private entities, including the U.S. Navy and Air Force, Concert Technologies, and Fox Studios. Byrd will lead DataOptek’s field and service operations, providing project planning, oversight, and review. He ensures quality service, expert advice, responsiveness, and the timely completion of every project. Byrd

He has started and grown as many as six successful businesses.
